American Affairs.

(London Merning Post (Ministerial), March 18 ]

Whilst the question of the propriety of recognizing the independence of the Southern Confederacy is being warmly discussed by neutral States, the intelligence reaches us from America that in the opinion of the Federal Senate the ultimate severance of the Northern from the Southern States is a con-Northern from the Southern States is a con-tingency not to be regarded as within the bounds of possibility.

The Senate whose Committee reported these resolutions has ceased to exist; and although its successor had already met for the although its successor had already met for the despatch of some urgent business, some months will probably clapse before the new Congress assembles at Washington. The result of the elections might perhaps bid us hope that a change of epinion would be effected in the minds of those who direct the affairs of the State and that the present Administration would not regard the contemptible farrago of the moribund. Senate as expressive of the universal opinion of the American public. But during the time which must intervene before the meeting of Congress, the Executive will not only possess unlimited control, but will be legally justified unlimited control, but will be legally justified unlimited control, but will be legally justified in proceeding in the path which the last words of the representatives of the people so clearly pointed out. It is scarcely difficult to conjecture what will be the official programme of the Federal Government for the next three months. The treasury, thanks to the late Congre s, will be filled to overflowing with notes. Fresh armies will be raised and the late Congre 5, will be the desired and fresh expeditions organized, which will be dispatched with great celat, and immediately afterwarde forgotten. Contractors will continue to gorge themselves at the public expense, and the unlimited demand in the cities of the North for rich dresses and precious stones will give the lie to those who had that the community is at the acme of cious stones will give the lie to those who deny that the community is at the acme of prosperity. The frontiers of the two Confederations will remain usehanged, the flaets of the North will continue to ble c'alle the Southern ports, and the export trade of the atter will remain suspended.

But whilst matters will thus remain unchanged on the other side of the Atlantic, what will be the attitude of those who have hitherto continued passive spectators of the war? Will England and France continue to support by charity those whom the folly and wickedness of others deprive of the means and wickedness of others deprive of the means of supporting themselves by honest industry?
Will these Powers look on with apathy and indifference at the gradual and sure demoralization of large masses of an industrious population compelled for a long period to eat, the bread of idleness? It would be expecting too much from human nature to suppose that too much from tunan nature to suppose that habits of idleness and inactivity, when once generated, can be instantaneously exchanged for those which are demanded by laborious occupation. The evils which have been occupationed in Lancashire by the suspension of the cotton supply will long survive the removal of their immediate cause. In the traits in which Eached and Fanner are now straits in which England and France are now straits in which ragiand and France are now placed, it will be absolutely necessary, so oner or later, that something should be done. Will those Powers be converted by the resulutions of the American Senate, and patiently wait for the re-establishment in all its original splendor of the American Union? Will they splendor of the American Union? Will they send to Richmond and impress upon the leaders of the Confederacy the hopelts accs of the enterprise which they have undertaken? Will they point out to Jefferson Davis that a Government which has been unable to push its armies two days' march from its own Cap-its armies two days' march from its own capital, must in process of time subjugate a territory whose area exceeds eight hundred thousand square miles?

But if France and England do not become converts to the opinion of the Federal Administration and the Federal Senate, will administration and the Federal Senate, will send the following they, although believing in the final separa-tion of the Southern States from the Union, continue in their present passive attitude? They must not, unless at the risk of committing an "unfriendly act," bint the propriety of bringing the contest to a close. It would of bringing the contest to a close. It would be idle to speculate on what will be the future conduct of the great maritime Towers of Europe, but certainly the avowed sentiments of the Foreign Secretary of the Federal Gov-ernment and of the Senate, supply grounds for some approach to decisive action. Wedo not believe that France will remain so thoroughly impassive as heretofore. Her pro-posals of mediation, it is not too much to say, were dictated rather by the interests of her own people than by those of the Ameri-can nation. But if she must not mediate, if the war must still proceed, the evils which prompted her interference will still remain unredressed. Will she continue to bear them with patience, now that all prospect of a speedy cessation of the war seems entirely extinguished? England suffers more than exinguished? England suffers more than France; but perhaps her patience may be more enduring. At all events, the Governments of both countries have now tolerably good grounds for ascertaining the probable course of affairs in America for the next few months, and they may fairly enough determine the course to be adopted upon the assumption that the war will continue till the autumn of the present year.

COCHINEAL SUPERSEDED .- As everybody knows, the various shades of searlet and crimson with which textile fabries are dyed or printed were made from cochineal. Cochineal is an insect taken in Mexico, from the broad leaves of the cactus. Ordinarily, it would now command an enormous price It is worth even less now than it was ten years ago. The cause of this decline in value of cachineal is because of the discovery of a more beautiful dye, called analine, produced from our native coal oil. From this coal oil, by tedious process, is produced this analine, of which, by the way, a single pound got Seo. Us, differences we believe as analine, of which, by the way, a single pound costs $80. Its diffuseness, we believe, ex ceeds that of any known substance. A pound of it would impart a perceptible tint to a large pond of water. At a lactory, recently, where silk handkerchies are printed, we had an opportunity of observing the incomparable superiority of the new colors to those produced by cochineal. Analine gives every shade of purple, from the deepest royal to the faint lilae; every variety of blue, from the pale tint of the sky to the deepest ultramarine; and all the gradations of scarlet aid crimson of like beauty. Coal oil, that in its crude state is as dangetous as gunpowder, crude state is as dangelous as gunpowder, and as offensive to the senses as the odor of a pole-cat, is one of the greatest innovations (f modern times.—Business Mirror.

When I behold a fashionable table, set out in all its magnificence, I fancy that I see gouts and dropsice, fevers and lethargies, with other innumerable distempers, lying in ambuscade among the dishes. Nature delights in the most plain and simple diet. Every animal but man keeps to one dish. Herbs are the food of this species, fish of that, and flesh of a third. Man fulls upon everything that comes in his way, not the smallest truit or excrescence of the earth, scarce a berry, or a mushroom can escape him—Addison. When I behold a fashionable table, set out

THE TELEGRAMATIC NEWS. The notion that newspapers are made up of what passes from mouth to mouth, was never better illustrated than in the telegramatic intelligence received by the Eliza Anderson, via Portland. We have all sorts of reports-all sorts of authorities-Gen. Hooker with the "blues," and Gen. Hooker on a lieve, would puzzle Colenso, himself-who has self-satisfiedly unravelled all the mysteries that wiser heads have been puzzled with for three thousand years. About the only certain starting point that we can find is the telegram that gold is rapidly declining. Last advices it was 56 per cent. premium; but we are in the dark as to how low the fiscal barrometer of Wall street has fallen. It ha fallen, we are willing to believe-but wheth er through Gen. Hooker or the "bears" o Wall street, is another difficulty to solve. We are willing to attribute it to the fact that Gen. Hooker is not captured, after five days' hard fighting, in which more than a fourth of his army were either killed, wounded or made prisoners--which, at a fair computation from telegramatic data, would be about twentyfive thousand men. The next point worthy of attention is that Gen. Hooker's ermy had got back to Falmouth, their old quarters. With Heintzleman's $0,000 that reinforced the Federals on the 6th or 7th of May, Hooker's army would be as strong as before he crossed the Rappahannock. It is not to be supposed, that in the sacrifice and disabling of 25,000 Federals the Confederates would escape with a much smaller loss The last fight on the 7th reports the loss heavy on both sides; and that, in all proba bility, is an index to the whole series of engagements. We learn, however, that Lee was also reinforced from the divection of Go:donsville or Colpepper. Such being the case, we cannot perceive anything unreasonable in the report that Ecoker has once more crossed the Rappahannock. It is somewhat doubtful whether it is true, as it is based merely on rumor. But what could be experted of the Federal general, except an advance?' And more particularly if his combinations had succeeded to any reasonable extent? If he did not advance when Lee was partially crippled, when could he be expected? We are now speculating on the data supplied by rum irs; and that is about all that the news is composed of. The reported capture of Richmond is a more doubtful matter than the idea that Hooker had recrossed the Pappahannock. That Hooker has received a severe handling, there is no shadow of doubt. If he had not, it is not at all likely that President Lincoln and Gen. Halleck would have paid him a visit. They did McClellan at Turkey Bend, and Burnside at Fredericksburg, a similar honor. Afterwards, McClellan retreated from before Richmond to Acquia Creek, and a report was given out that he had changed his base of operations. Possibly, Gen. Hooker's recrossing of the Rappahannock may be a change of his base of operations to get out of Lee's way. But if the latter conclusion were correct, why did not Lee cross the Rappahannock in pursuit of Hooker? If we can bring ourselves to the conclusion that Gen. Keyes has captured Richmond, that Stoneman holds the railroads at the junction ir Lee's rear, we may safely conclude that Hooker has really advanced; for Lee would very naturally fall back to recapture Richmond. Not having done soor "not having done so" not being in the rumors-looks very much like the noncapture of Richmond, which is no doubt nearest to the truth. One Federal army advancing up the Yorktown Peninsula on Richmond, whilst another force approached that

Stoneman cutting off the railroad communication, is evidence of a well planned campaign on the part of the Federals. But we are so accustomed to see all their plans overturned by Confederate generals, that we are not dis posed to place much reliance on the news. MATTERS IN PRUSSIA. Constitutionalism is still on its trial in The Address from the Prussian Prussia. Chamber of Deputies to the King provoked by Grey and Scarlet Woolen Shirts, &c. the arbitrary conduct of the monarch through his advisers, has been replied to personally, Laces, Ribbons, &c.: without the intervention of the ministry. To the accusation made by the Lower House against the ministers, of having last session Worked Muslin Collars and Sets, unconstitutionally carried on the administration, and expended public monies without a legal budget, the King replies that the acts Lace Veils and Falls, Silk Coras; Nets in question were done with the royal approbation. This permission he says he would not have given had he considered the con duct of his advisers a violation of the Constitution. It was impossible to concur, he continues, in the refusal of the Chamber of Deputies to grant the budget as sought for last year. The budget which that House was willing to allow was rejected by the Upper House. "The regulation of the budget" the reply goes on to state, "as prescribed by the Constitution, having become impossible for last year's session; and the Constitution containing no provision for such a case, it is incomprehensible that the Chambers should discern a violation of the Constitution, in that the Government had carried on the administration without a legally established budget." The King recognises the fact, that according to the Constitution a budget can be established only by a resolution agreed to by both chambers, and approved of by him; but he contends that in the absence of this agreement, the administration must be carried on without interruption. Now, if this means anything, it is that the Constitution applies in this respect to formalities only. If the Prussian Parliament votes the public moneys, he asks, for the purpose of carrying on the administration, why well and good, but he contends that he has a right to take them without so much as saying. by your leave, The King assumes the right to interpret the Constitution, and in doing so, interprets it to suit his own views, false though they may be, and moulded from mistaken notions of the Di vine right of kings. There is a difference of opinion between him and the people's representatives. He would have his opiniou prevail. In this he receives some support from a subservient Upper House. In an address from that body to the monarch they say, that " nowhere does the Constitution say who, in a dissension like the present one, is bound to give way;" but they contend that it is "the duty of the citizens to respect the paterna authority of the King." This is, of course, nothing less than an unqualified support of absolutism. However, the "Commons show no sign of giving in, but are fully resolved to maintain the right of the people,

THE BRITISH COLONIST through their representatives, to control the expenditure of the public money,-they are fully aware of the importance of the principle at stake—a principle which may be said to be the very foundation of limited monarchy. They have before them the example England, and still nearer and later that Austria, to encourage them in their battle for the people's liberties. If they only continue firm they will gain their end. The King of Prussia has had too many proofs of the uncertainty of Royal tenure in modern days to proceed much far ther in his present course. So that we may expect to hear before long of his coming to terms, and consenting to the views of the Lower House, as to their rights under the ROGUES AND VAGABONDS. John McDonald was brought up on re-mand, charged with being a rogue and vagabond. Sergeant Blake gave evidence as to the prisoner being associated with Derbyn and others, and after an inquiry into the case, the Magistrate said he would take McDon-ald's own recognizance in the sum of $50 to be of good behavior for six months.

Charles Derbyn was then also charged with the same offence. Sergeant Blake stated that prisoner was a vagrant and vagabond, and had been so for some months, and was d had been so for some months, and was ociated with a gang of good-for-nothing characters.

charge of having appropriated certain moneys, amounting to the sum of $70, to his own use. Mr. B. shop appeared for Hall and stated that it was a clever ruse of the man Jackson, who was in jail at New Westminster, to have Hall arrested. He could prove Jackson and Hall were propriets and therefore there sould Hall were partners, and therefore they could not charge another with embezzlement. Mr. Malowanski could prove that they were jointly interested in their transactions. His client had no opportunity of accounting for the moneys received, and, as captain, was agent for the owner. The Magistrate said that, as the prosecutor

Children's Complaints.

It is not generally known, but such is the fact, thachildren require medicine oftener than their parents. Three-fourtles of the children die before they attain the age of eight years. Let mothers, then, be wire and give to their children small doses of these invaluable Fills once or twice every week, it such quantity as may act gently upon the system twice in the twenty-four nours. For infants, a Lill may be crush; ed and given as a powder in a little water. The grows that are constantly floating about in the blood of children, the forerunners of so many comolinits, will thus be expelled, and the lives of thou sands saved and preserved to their parents.

CENTLEMEN,—YOU WILL SHORTLY BE called upon to exercise the most sacred frights of Britons, in selecting men of your own free will to manage your own local affairs, scrutinize and correct the course of Government, and adjust and impose taxation. While I feel that I have no especial claims to public support, I do a claim, in common with my fellow citizens, that I have en observed and expended some portion of my past energies here; and that in a new country like this I have a vight to aspire to a position in the mangement of the public affairs. I do not seek any office of emolument—I have never done so, nor is such my aim now. I am content to earn my living independent of Crown patronage; but the honor of representing my fellow citizens is a distinction which any man might be proud of, and I aspire to that. I hold the equal rights of all men to be of the first importance in all cases of legislation, and known no distinction of erecet, color, or country. Every colonist who has settled in this Colony as his future home, is entitled to equal privil gets with his neighbor, and for such principles I will always contend.
